

The Gatesville Sun denies that there was any disposition on the part of the citizens of Coryell county to hang the man Lloyd Coleman, as charged by the Belton Journal.

The Marlin Daily Ball is a unique little fellow, about as big as a sheet of note paper. It will be sustained, because it is a right smart little fellow, and is ably conducted.

Fort Graham Grange was organized at Fort Graham by Deputy L. E. Gillett "with twenty-three Charter members, ten women and thirteen men, on June 4th." A. Marsh, Master, J. M. Roberts, Secretary. Postoffice as above.

The Cleburn Chronicle comes out strongly against mob law, while it concedes the great difficulty in determining what ought to be done to give protection to the honest people from the thieves and murderers. It deprecates the hanging upon the ground that it retards the settlement of the country and turns away the tide of immigration, now happily turning in the direction of our magnificent frontier.

Letters patent have been issued to Dr. J. H. Lane, of this county, on improvement in cotton bale ties. From the plan and specifications which have been submitted to us, and which we have carefully examined, we are convinced that the new invention is indeed a great improvement. It not only combines greater strength and convenience, than any now in use, but is cheaper by more than one half. Dr. Lane has not yet perfected arrangements for the manufacture of this tie, but hopes to do so in time for next year's crop.

A little frontier paper which shall be nameless, puts its own little self square on the record as being opposed to the present farmers movement that like a benison of the spirit of good, rests upon the sturdy farmers of Texas. This sentiment on the outskirts of Texas civilization is snapping his fingers in the face of a movement whose character he wholly misapprehends, and whose aims and objects he woefully misrepresents. The farmers of Texas can live without him. He is neither a teacher nor a leader among them, and his strictures and his sneers are alike a matter of the supremest indifference to them.

The following brief note from the irrepressible "Brick" Pomeroy will not be found altogether without interest to our readers:

New York, May 29th.
J. W. DOWNS, Waco.
DEAR SIR—Thanks for your very kind favor of May 18th, enclosing $2. The money is very good in these hard times, but not all the money in the world is so good or well received as the kind words and good wishes which came in your letter. These are close times for honest men, but some one tells us "truth is mighty and will prevail." When I look back over the record of Texas and see how she suffered under the dictatorship of Davis and others, and then see how gloriously she stands forth now under her present most excellent Governor, Richard Coke, I feel that a better day can be made to come for every other State—for the entire Republic.
I am glad that your paper so earnestly defends the Patrons of Husbandry, and believe that they have in their power to redeem the country from the sad condition into which it has fallen.
Fraternally thine,
M. M. POMEROY.

The Telegraph, of the 4th, is afraid to believe that the Democratic party of Texas is unworthy of notice.

Aye! and well you may be. Its power has been felt in the conventions and in the Legislature. It is only now opening its eyes to the fact that inside of its own fold has crept such men and papers as the Telegraph, whose presence there means doubt, time-serving, truckling, who are only there to destroy. When a paper without a Democratic record assumes to furnish the law and to ostracize journals and men whose loyalty to the party is life-long, men and papers whose devotion to the party has never been questioned by any except itself, its action may well be scrutinized, its motives scanned closely and rigorously. We predict a short career for this third party advocate. If reforms are needed, let them be made inside of party lines. Let not the old, battle-scarred veterans of Democracy be displaced by this new, and entirely too liberal, candidate for Democratic immortality.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

In casting about for a plausible reason for the passage of a law of this kind, a measure fraught with so much danger, to the South, whose effects must be so disastrous upon the people of this section, only just now beginning to feel solid ground once again under their feet, we are forced inevitably to the conclusion that it was dictated by a feeling of hatred and revenge on the part of the ultra radicals of the North, combined with the characterless and irresponsible rabble who represent that hopeless minority in the South. It is intended that the weight of this iniquitous measure fall on the South, as far as its provisions can effect the people of the North, they will not, and indeed cannot feel any of its hardships, but here the case is different. Here is located the body of our black populations; here is found the sum of their ignorance and prejudice, and here is to be the theatre of the troubles that must ensue upon its enforcement, and upon this people must fall the responsibility of resisting a law whose enactments are hideous to the aggregate intelligence of the people.

And, again, another melancholy effect will be to disturb and disrupt the systems of public and free instruction now so generally adopted in the South, and where benignant effects were only beginning to be felt and appreciated by the people, and whose chief beneficiary is the negro himself. Their dawning intelligence must then be nipped in the bud, and rolled backward by their self-elected and self constituted champions.

The behavior of the colored people of Texas, in those localities where the baleful influences of ultra negro equality is unknown, has been unexceptionable. No thought of social equality, it is safe to say, has ever entered their minds; and indeed we, from our knowledge of their habits, tastes, hopes, ends and aims, are forced to the belief that they do not desire it, nor would we fear but that the law would remain a dead letter, were it not for designing men who ever stand ready with evil counsel to mislead the ignorant and the inexperienced. Men who only come to the surface in times of revolution, and who, as soon as order is restored, must sink back into their wonted obscurity. These men we say, with such a law upon the statute books, would be, and prove the points of destruction to this land—so much in need of rest and political quiet. We trust the bill, should it pass the House, will be vetoed by the President.

Dr. Grant's Gift-Edged Butter.

Another candidate for high honors in the worthy effort to increase the world's supply of good butter is Dr. A. H. Grant, who is described by an appreciative correspondent as "a Georgian by birth, a New Englander by marriage, a physician by profession, a scientist by nature, a nobleman in hospitality, a student enriched by foreign culture and travel, and withal a man with a decided penchant for farming." Whether he expects to have "this and Heaven too" we are not informed, but we are in possession of some interesting particulars concerning his dairy farm which is called "Longview," is located at Enfield in Connecticut, and is a compact homestead of 155 acres, well watered, and especially adapted to grass and grazing. The number of his cows is not given, but most of them have royal names. They are carefully stabled, tied with ropes about the neck, bedded with sand on a plank floor, carded daily, and their udders sponged before each milking. Every dairy virtue is in vogue here, and the greatest of them is cleanliness. The winter's feed is prepared in a large steam-chest of a capacity of about six cubic feet, with rubber packings around the lid; into this 200 bushels chopped hay and stalks mixed with 4 bushels of corn meal and 8 of wheat bran are turned at a time; about 60 gallons of water are added and the steam from an engine 500 feet distant, brought through underground iron pipes laid in cement, is let on twice a week. It takes from 10 to 15 hours to cook a box full, but the engine is used for pumping, grinding, churning, washing, etc., besides. Each cow is supplied twice a day with a bushel of the mixture at a time, and long hay when more feed is needed. The milk goes to a spring-house, the water of which is kept at the right temperature in winter by a novel and ingenious arrangement of pipe-coils from the engine. Cylindrical tin-pails 20 inches deep are used for setting; these are lowered into the water for half an hour, or until the animal heat is expelled, and then drawn up by pulleys and suspended over the water for 36 to 48 hours. The cream is then removed with a funnel-shaped skimmer, which, after being dipped in the water to prevent sticking, is lowered into the pails and the cream rushes over its edge. The churn is a clean-washed white oak of the old dasher sort; a steam attachment is applied, strokes are 48 per minute, which, when the cream is 60 degrees, brings the butter in an hour. As soon as the butter granulations appear a few quarts of cold water are poured into the churn; the butter is worked on an oak table with an octagon lever; the bare hand never touches it; salt is incorporated according to taste; the butter is then placed in a close skin and deposited in the spring-room to be cooled and reworked into balls the following day, moisture being absorbed by a sponge wrapped in a linen napkin. The product last year was about 4000 pounds, all sold to one dealer in the neighboring village, and it seems in a fair way to be in demand in more distant regions.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Chicago Times has advice from all sections of the Northwest, showing the condition of the crops. With but few exceptions the indications point to an abundant yield of all the cereals. The acreage of wheat is fully up to that of last year, and there will probably be quite as large an area of corn put in when it is all planted. Other crops are looking well and if no untoward event occurs the granaries of the Northwest will laugh with an abundant harvest.

HOUSTON, June 6.—The Grand Commandery of Knights Templar have changed their time of meeting to the 4th Wednesday in January next, at Houston.

A most headish attempt to throw the cars from the track of the Great Northern Railroad has been disclosed. A negro, an escaped penitentiary convict, stopped at some negro quarters at New Waverly, on the Great Northern Railroad. The occupants, suspecting his character, had him arrested and carried into the village. A number of ties and other obstructions were found across the rails. The negro, whose name is John Henry, acknowledges having put them there.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Schurz has malaria fever.

In the House, the Deficiency Bill was sent to the Conference Committee.

The House passed a bill in relation to the Mississippi levees. It is regarded as another act of justice to the Southwest. It provides for the appointment of a commission of two.

solely due to the recent law compelling importers to pay twenty-five per cent. of duties in gold. The Treasury is no longer receiving the equivalent of this twenty-five per cent. In paper as was done at first. Concha orders the Spanish bank to red gold on account of the stand treasury at less premium than that quoted on Exchange or by brokers. Concha fixes the amount of premium for which government gold is to be sold daily, the rate for the current day being posted at the entrance of the bank every morning at 8 o'clock, so that merchants can make their calculations before business hour.

AUSTIN, June 6, 1874.—Judge Bradley, of the Circuit Court has left for Washington, Judge Duval presiding.

There is some talk of a highway robbery at the depot last night, but can not be traced to any authoritative source. Officers of the engineer corps and three civil engineers, to make a full report of the best system for a permanent reclamation and redemption of the alluvial basin of the Mississippi, which report the President is to transmit to Congress at its next session, with his recommendation thereon. The civil members of the commission to receive $5000 a year each and traveling expenses, and the Secretary to receive $200 a month. The amendments making the commission consist of three army engineers, and two civil engineers were adopted. The bill passed by a vote of 100 yeas to 90 nays.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Henri Rochefort, with his companions, Payne and Benedict, sailed this morning for Europe in the steamer Parthia. Their departure was witnessed by a number of French Communists.

The St. Louis Millers' Association propose the organization of a national miller's insurance company, wherein all mills and stock therein shall be insured.

VIENNA, June 6.—The Catholic Episcopate of Bohemia has determined to resist the ecclesiastical law. A passive opposition has already commenced, by appointments to vacant livings.

The flag presentation is the whole subject of talk. The flag was silk and cost $134, and the Misses Mollie Duval, Eva Moore, Phillips Zimmlen, Dewey Sheppard, Lillie Hamilton, and Misses Moses Howell and Homet, were principal contributors. They all belong to the Hill City Club. Ben Howell is a color bearer, and justly proud of the flag entrusted to him.
